For Good Roads To Be Backed Up
By Chamber of Commerce, Which Wants a Committee To Handle Money and Work

The Mason Fiscal Court and the Good Roads Division of the Chamber of Commerce met Saturday afternoon at the courthouse for the purpose of discussing the need of good roads in Mason county and the advisability of voting a bond issue for same.

Mr. E. T. Kirk was elected chairman of the meeting and Mr. Thomas
P. Boone was elected secretary. Mr.
Kirk explained to the members of the Fiscal Court and those present that the object of the meeting was to discuss with the court the advisability of voting a bond issue for the construction of good roads in Mason county and that a road commission was to handle all the funds and to look after the construction of the roads in case the issue carried, taking the matter out of the hands of the Fiscal Court.

County Attorney Rees read to the members of the court the law passed at the last meeting of the Kentucky
General Assembly allowing the Fiscal Court to elect a road commission of not less than four members and to be equally divided as to the two leading political parties. These men are to be paid the same and operate the same as the Fiscal Court would under other former state aid law. It was explained that the forming of this commission was to be created by the Fiscal Court and was to take care of the work because of the fact that said court had too many other matters to attend to. The members of the court were asked what they thought of the matter and expressed their willingness to be relieved of the burden.

It was also suggested that an advisory committee, composed of one member from each precinct in the county, which will work without pay, be selected to advise in the work.

To this end a motion was made that the chairman appoint a committee of men from the present at Saturday's meeting to nominate four or more men from the county as members of the commission and that their names be placed before the Fiscal Court at its meeting Tuesday or later in the week. Chairman Kirk appointed Messrs. A. Clooney, Al Lukins, David Hunter, Watt Worthington and Alfred Peed.

AFFLICTED DAUGHTER

Of Former Maysville Man To Be
Queen of May Dance At Bur-nett's Woods, Cincinnati.

Agatha Bloom, 7, 2629 Park avenue, elected May Queen by the children municipal dancing class, Saturday, will not hear the music to which she will lead the public May dance at Burnett Woods, Saturday, May 13.

The little May Queen is both deaf and mute. So instead of hearing she will "feel" the music tingling in the rosy tips of little pink feet, and it may even be that she sees it also. Burnett Woods should be a lovely place for fairies, who might care to disclose themselves sooner to a little silent
May Queen than to any other.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
Frank Bloom, her father being the son of Mrs. Ellen Bloom and was born in this city. After a battle for her life with spinal meningitis several years ago, the little miss arose from her bed deaf and dumb and has never been able to utter a sound since.

A BIG JOB.

Employees of the Maysville Street Railway Company endeavored to pump the water out from under the viaduct Sunday afternoon, but after pumping for a short while they found out that the task was too large and the water was left to run out by natural means.
The work was resumed Monday morning when the water was somewhat lower and traffic to the East End is again open to the public.

MRS. WILLIAM KENNEDY DEAD.

Mrs. Amanda Sears of East Second street, received a message Sunday announcing the death of her sister, Mrs.
William Kennedy, at her home in Carlisle. She was 72 years old and the mother of the late Judge Hanson Kennedy, one of the best known attorneys in this section. Mrs. Robert Luman, a niece, attended the funeral, which was held at Carlisle Monday morning.

RELIGIOUS CENSUS TAKEN.

Between seventy and eighty people from the different Maysville Sunday schools made a complete tour of the city Sunday afternoon taking a religious census of the city. The object of this work was to assist the local pastors in their work and also to assist the Sunday schools in obtaining a banner attendance on "Go-to-Sunday-school" day.

and up-to-date soda fountain at their place of business some time this week.
Messrs. Bierley says that what their store lacks in size they will make up in quality, service and fair treatment.

Miss Gertrude Baugh and Mr. Ned Piper were Sunday visitors in Vanceburg.

Miss Gertrude Baugh was a visitor in Cincinnati Saturday and Sunday.

Messrs. Sherman Arn, William Mc-Ilvain and George Frank were Cincinnati visitors Sunday.

JOHN M'CARAHAN
Father of Mrs. J. P. Nash of This City, and G. A. R. Veteran, Passed Away at the Home of His Daughter in Lewis County Saturday Night.

Taps sounded for another G. A. R. veteran Saturday night about 8:50 o'clock when Mr. John McCarahan, aged 80 years, father of Mrs. J. P.
Nash of this city, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James C. Boyd, at Cottageville, Lewis county.
Deceased was born on June 18, 1835,
near West Union, Adams county, Ohio. When the Civil war broke out he enlisted as a private in Company
E, Ninety-first Regulars, Ohio Infantry. Soon after the war he was married to Miss Almarinda Frye and later moved to Cottageville, Lewis county, to live. His wife preceded him to the grave more than six years ago. He is survived by two daughters and three sons, Mrs. J. P. Nash of this city, Mrs.
John C. Boyd of Cottageville, Frank McCarahan of Chicago, Sam McCarahan of Lewiston, Ill., and Fred Mc-Carahan of Cottageville.

The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Ebenezer Presbyterian church, Cottage-ville, with services by Rev. Haney.

THE WEATHER MAN

Promises Us Some More Rain For This Section This Week, As If We Have Not Had Enough.

Weather predictions for the week beginning Sunday were announced by the Weather Bureau as follows:

"Indications are that temperatures will average near normal throughout eastern and southern states and west of the Rocky Mountains, but somewhat below normal over the northwestern states, plains states, upper Mississippi valley and Lake regions. No unusually low temperatures for the season, are probable in any section.

"Well distributed rains are probable east of the Rocky Mountains. There will be rains at the beginning of the week over much of the country of the Mississippi river attending the eastward movement of a disturbance that now covers the Lake region, the Mississippi valley and the southwest.

"Another disturbance is forming over the western plateau. It will move slowly eastward reaching the great central valleys and plains states about Thursday or Friday. This disturbance will be attended by unsettled weather and quite general rains east of the Rocky Mountains."

BAD BUMP

Mr. James Cochran Struck His Head Against a C. & O. Girder on Bridge Street, Inflicting a Painful Wound.

Mr. James Cochran, while transferring from one street car to another
Saturday at noon, got an ugly bump.
He was walking on the raised platform the company had put along Bridge street from Second street to the east end of the bridge, and in going under the C. & O. in a stooping position he raised up and struck his head against the heavy iron girder. The impact broke the skin on his forehead, from which he bled profusely, and knocked him off his feet.
One side of him going into the water.
Fortunately the good-natured gentleman was not injured seriously, and besides a partial wetting, was able to get out all right, and it is hoped he will not suffer any inconvenience from the unexpected experience.

Chinese troops at Swatow and Chao-Chow-Fu, in Kwang-Tung province, China, have mutinied and joined the revolutionists. Missionaries in the southern part of Fo-Kien province have been notified to be ready to flee.
The United States gunboat Wilmington is at Swatow and the cruiser Brooklyn is at Shanghai ready to be of assistance.

Mr. Jesse Colvin of Augusta, is a business visitor in the city.

SHAMS IN THE RUG TRADE.

A New York trade report states that orders for rugs and carpets are coming in from all over the country. And prices are advancing, due to scarcity of colorings and other material. Housewives look forward in spring to the bright and clean effect of a new floor coverings with keen anticipation. The man of the place is sympathetic, but perturbed about costs. He will be more so this year.

There are pretenses and shams in the rug trade which people should know more about. Many persons have been paying high prices without getting what they supposed. The craze for oriental rugs, the notion that they are necessary for artistic house interiors, has upset many thrifty plans of economy.

Formerly oriental rug making was in the hands of people having a well trained sense for beauty of color and appropriateness of design. As the market was artificially stimulated from this country, the majority of the old world rug makers commercialized their business. They turned out a more hasty product, bought rugs regardless of merit to fill the eager demand. Anything went, at a big price, too. The oriental colors are usually good, but in design a great many of the rugs are coarse and grotesque. And today many American makers are imitating their faults of bold and staring design, without being able to copy their beauty of colorings.

It is amusing to see a lot of the New York Rich come rolling down to the big city emporiums, buying these costly fabrics right and left. They return rejoicing, believing they have acquired things that will stamp them as persons of cultivated discrimination. But to those who know, their spoils are very often incongruous and tawdry. Frequently they are inferior in taste to far less expensive material formerly turned out by our home producers.

Buy rugs of some one you know, who understands the inwardness of the business.

NO PROHIBITORY TARIFF DESIRED.

The New York Journal of Commerce publishes a special from Washington which attempts to show a change of attitude among certain interests throughout the country on the subject of the tariff. "The old style demand for practically prohibitory protection is growing weaker in many sections," says the article, "and in some quarters is disappearing." It is doubtful if any such demand ever seriously existed. The American sentiment for protection to domestic industries, as represented in the legislation of the Republican party, has never been for absolute prohibition of imports.

A fair adjustment of duty rates which would give our producers an even break in their home market is what they have asked. The Republican party has always placed its chief reliance for revenue on the protective tariff—a tax paid chiefly by the foreigner and which is of general benefit to the country. Obviously the levying of extortionate rates would result in the loss of this revenue to the extent that the rates were prohibitive, and Republican tariff laws have been remarkably good revenue producers.

The Underwood law was characterized by its framers as a "competitive" measure. It is, to the limit. Under it 74 per cent of our imports are coming in free, and the average duty rate now hovers around 8 per cent. As a revenue producer it is a farce, and the Democrats are now suggesting fifty-seven varieties of taxation to bolster it up.

The change of attitude on the tariff, where it exists, is in the direction of the Republican protective idea. This change has been most marked in the south, which, if it could vote on the tariff today, would show a huge majority for the protective policy.

Senator Taggart, says a dispatch from Washington, can have his choice of two chairmanships—of the committee on woman suffrage or the committee on forest reservation and the protection of game; and, it adds, "he will probably take the latter"—being, as always, the wise little guy.

General Villa has been killed so many times we can't see why the cuss don't stay dead.

Stingaree

BY E. W. HORNUNG.

THE MOTH AND THE STAR.

DARLINGHURST JAIL, had never immured a more interesting prisoner than the back block bandit, who was tried and convicted under the strange style and title which he had made his own. Not even in prison was his real name ever known, and the wild speculations of some imaginative officials were nothing else up to the end. There was enough color in their wildness, however, to crown the convict with a certain halo of romance, which his behavior in jail did nothing to dispel. That, of course, was exemplary, since Stingaree had never been a fool, but it was something more and rarer. Not content simply to follow the line of least resistance, he exhibited from the first a spirit and a philosophy unique indeed beneath the broad arrow, and, so far from decreasing with the years of his captivity, these attractive qualities won him friend after friend among the officials and privilege upon privilege at their hands, while amply justifying the romantic interest in his case.

At last there came to Sydney a person more capable of an acute appreciation of the heroic villain than his most ardent admirer on the spot. Lucius Brady was a long haired Irishman of letters, bard and bookworm, rebel and reviewer. In his ample leisure he was also the most enthusiastic criminologist in London, and as president of an exceedingly exclusive society for the cultivation of criminals, even from London did he come for a prearranged series of interviews with the last and the most distinguished of all the bush rangers.

It was to Lucius Brady, his biographer to be, that Stingaree confided the data of all the misdeeds recounted in these pages, but of his life during the quiet intervals, of his relations with confederates and his more honest dealings with honest folk (of which many a pretty tale was rife) he was not to be persuaded to speak without an irritating reserve.

"Keep to my points of contact with the world, about which something is known already, and you shall have the whole truth of the matter," said the convict. "But I don't intend to give away the altogether unknown, and I doubt if it would interest you if I did. The most interesting thing to me has been the different types with whom I have had what it pleases you to term professional relations and the very different ways in which they have taken me. You read character by flashlight along the barrel of your revolver. What you should do is to hunt up my various victims and get at their point of view. You really mustn't press me to hawk back to mine. As it is, you bring a whiff of the outer world, which makes me bristle my wings against the bars."

The criminologist gloated over such speeches from such lips. It would have touched another to note what an irresistible fascination the bars had for the wings despite all pain.

Lucius Brady's interest in Stingaree was exclusively intellectual. His heart never ached for a roving spirit in confinement. It did not occur to him to suppress a detail of his own days in Sydney, down to the attractions of an Italian restaurant he had discovered near the jail, the flavor of the Chianti and so forth. On the contrary, it was most interesting to note the play of features in the tortured man, who, after all, brought his torture on himself by asking so many questions. Soon, when his visitor left him, the bondman could follow the free in all but the flesh through every corridor of the prison and every street outside, to the hotel where you read the English papers on the veranda or to the little restaurant where the Chianti was corked with oil, which the waiter removed with a wisp of tow.

At the most interesting moments in the meetings of the highly intellectual societies Lucius Brady would rise and declare, "I'm going on a little jaunt to the prison to call on Stingaree."

One day late in the afternoon, as Lucius Brady was beaming on him through his spectacles and indulging in an incisive criticism on the champagne at Governor's house, Stingaree quietly garroted him. A gag was in all readiness, likewise strips of coarse sheeting torn up for the purpose in the night. Black in the face, but with breath still in his body, the criminologist was carefully gagged and tied down to the bedstead, while his living image (at a casual glance) stroled with bent head, black sombrero, spectacles and frock coat first through the cold corridors and presently along the streets.

The heat of the pavement striking to his soles was the first of a hundred exquisite sensations, but Stingaree did not permit himself to savor one of them. Indeed, he had his work cut out to check the pace his heart dictated, and it was by an admirable exercise of the will that he wandered along, deep to all appearance in a Camelot classic which he had found in the criminologist's pocket, in reality blinded by the glasses, but all the more vigilant out of the corners of his eyes.

A suburb was the scene of these perambulations. Had he but dared to lift his face Stingaree might have caught a glimpse of the bluest of blue water, and his prison eyes hungered for the sight, but he would not raise his eyes so long as footsteps sounded on the same pavement. By taking judicious turnings, however, he drifted into a quiet road, with gray suburban bungalows on one side and building lots on the other. No step approached. He could look up at last. And the very bungalow that he was passing was shut up, yet furnished. The people had merely gone away for a few days, servants and all.

He saw it at a glance from the newspapers plastering the windows which caught the sun. In an instant he was in the garden, and in another he had forced a side gate leading by an alley to back yard and kitchen door. But for many minutes he went no farther than this gate, behind which he cowered, prepared with excuses in case he had already been observed.

It was at this interval that Stingaree recalled the season with a thrill, for it was Christmas week, and without a doubt the house would be empty till the new year.

There was one port for the storm that must follow his escape. And a very pleasant port he found it on entering after due precautionary delay.

Clearly the abode of young married people, the bungalow was fitted and furnished with a taste which appealed almost painfully to Stingaree. The drawing room was draped in sheets, but the walls carried a few good engravings, some of which he remembered with a stab. It was the dressing room, however, that he wanted, and the dressing room made him rub his hands. The dainty establishment had no more luxurious corner what with the fitted bath, circular shaving glass, packed trousers press, a row of boots on trees and a fine old wardrobe full of hanging coats. Stingaree began by selecting his suit, and it may have been his vanity or a strange longing to look for once what he once had been, but he could not resist the young man's excellent evening clothes.

"This fellow comes from home," said he, "and they are spending their Christmas pretty far back, or he would have taken these with him."

He had wallowed in the highly enamored bath and was looking for a towel when he saw his head in the shaving glass. He was dry enough before he could think of anything else. There was a dilemma, obvious, yet unforeseen—that shaven head! Purple and fine linen could not disguise the convict's crop. A wig was the only hope, but to wear a wig one must first try it on—and let the perquisite call the police. The knot was Gordian. And yet desperately as Stingaree sought unravelment he was at the same time subconsciously as deep in a study of a face so unfamiliar that at first he had scarcely known it for his own. It was far leaner than of old. It was no longer richly tanned.

The mouth called louder than ever for a mistake. The hair, that there was of it, seemed iron gray. It had certainly receded considerably at the temples.

Stingaree when he left the house in evening clothes had no money, but he had a handsome pair of opera glasses, which he converted into change on the gratuitous plea that he had forgotten his purse at the first pawnbroker's on the confines of the city. The pawnbroker talked Greek to him at once.

"It's a pity you won't be able to see 'er, sir, as well as 'ear 'er," said he.

"Perhaps they have them on hire in the theater," replied Stingaree at a venture. The pawnbroker's face instantly advised him that his observation was wide of the obscure mark.

"The theater! You won't 'ear 'er at any theater in Sydney, nor yet in the southern hemisphere. Town 'alls is the only lay for 'ilda Bouverle out 'ere."

At first the name conveyed nothing to Stingaree, yet it was not wholly unfamiliar.

"Of course," said he. "The town hall I meant."

The pawnbroker leered as he put down a sovereign and a shilling.

"What a season she's 'aving, sir?"

"Ah, what a season!"

And Stingaree wagged his opera hat head.

"Undreds of pounds' worth of flowers flung on to every platform and not a dry eye in the place!"

"I know," said the feeling Stingaree.

"It's wonderful to think of this 'ere colony producing the world's best primer dinner!"

"It is, indeed."

"When you think of 'er start."

"That's true."

The pawnbroker leaned across his counter and leered more than ever in his customer's face.

"They say she ain't no better than she ought to be."

"Really?"

"It's right, too, but what can you expect of a primer dinner whose fortune was made by a bloodthirsty bushranger like that there Stingaree?"

"You little scurriously wretch!" cried the bushranger and lunged out of the shop that second.

It was a miracle. He remembered everything now. Then he had done the world a service as well as the woman. He gave thanks for the guinea in his pocket and asked his way to the town hall, and as he marched down the middle of the lighted streets the first flock of newshybs came flying in his face.

"Escape of Stingaree! Escape of Stingaree! Cowardly outrage on famous author! Escape of Stingaree!"

The damp pink papers were in the hands of the overflow crowd outside the hall. His own name was already in every mouth, continually coupled with that of the world renowned Hilda Bouverle. It did not deter the convict from elbowing his way through the mass that gloated over his deed exactly as they would have gloated over his destruction on the gallows. "I have my ticket; I have been detained," he told the police, and at the last line of defense he whispered, "A guinea for standing room!" And the guinea got it.

It was the interval between parts one and two. He thought of that other interval, when he had made such a different entry at the same juncture. The other concert room would have gone some fifty times into this. All at once fell a hush and then a rising thunder of applause, and some one requested Stingaree to remove his hat. He did so, and a cold creeping of the shaved flesh reminded him of his general position and of this particular peril. But no one took any notice of him or of his head. And it was not Hilda Bouverle this time. It was a pianiste in violent ungainly and elaborate lace, whose performance also was loud and embroidered. Followed a beautiful young baritone whom Miss Bouverle had brought from London in her pocket for the tour. He sang three little songs very charmingly indeed, but there was no encore. The gods were burning for their own. Percutatory plaudits died in a dramatic pause.

And then, and then, amid deafening salvos a dazzling vision appeared upon the platform, came forward with the carriage of a conscious queen, stood bowing and beaming in the glass and glitter of fabric and of gem that were yet less radiant than herself. Stingaree stood inanimate between stamping feet and clapping hands. No; he would never have connected this magnificent woman with the simple bush girl in the unpretentious frocks that he recalled as clearly as her former self. He had looked for less finery, less physical development, less indeed of the grand operatic tout ensemble. But acting ended with her smile, and much of the old innocent simplicity came back as the lips parted in song. And her song had not been spoiled by riches and adulation. Her song had not sacrificed sweetness to artifice. There was even more than the old mangle in her song.

Is this a dream?
Then waking would be pain!
Oh, do not wake me!
Let me dream again.

It was no new number even then; even Stingaree had often heard it and heard great singers go the least degree flat upon the first "dream." He listened critically. Hilda Bouverle was not one of the delinquents. Her intonation was as perfect as that of the great violinists, her high notes had the rarefied quality of the E string finely touched. It was a flawless, if a purely popular, performance; and the musical heart of one listener in that crowded room was too full for mere applause. She had to yield; she yielded with a winning grace. And the first bars of the new song set one full heart beating, so that the earlier words were lost upon his brain.

She ran before me in the meads,
And down this world worn track
She leads me on, but while she leads
She never gazes back.

And yet her voice is in my dreams,
To which me more and more,
That wailing voice! Ah, me, it seems Less near me than of yore!

Lightly I sped when hope was high,
And youth beguiled the chase;
I follow—follow still, but I Shall never see her face.

So the song ended, and in the ultimate quiet the need of speech came over Stingaree.

"The Unrealized Ideal," he informed a neighbor.

"Rather!" rejoined the man, treating the stale news as a mere remark. "We never let her off without that."

"I suppose not," said Stingaree.

"It's the song the bushranger forced her to sing at the back block concert, and it made her fortune. Good old Stingaree!"

"You don't happen to know where Hilda Bouverle is staying, I suppose?" asked the bushranger. "I've met her once or twice, and I might call."

The other smiled as on some suicidal moth.

"There's only one place good enough for a star like her in Sydney."

"And that is?"

"Government house."

His excellency of the moment was a young nobleman of sporting proclivities and your true sportsman's breadth of mind. He was immensely popular with all sects and sections but the aggressively puritanical and the narrowly austere. It was the obvious course for such a governor and his kindred lady to insist upon making the great Miss Bouverle their guest for the period of her professional sojourn in the capital, and a semi-bohemian supper at the government house was but a characteristic finale to her first great concert.

The prima donna sat on the governor's right, and at the proper point his excellency sang her praises in a charmingly informal speech, which delighted and amused the press men, actors and actresses whom he had collected for the occasion.

A charming suit of rooms had been placed at the disposal of the prima donna. The boudoir was like a hot-house with the floral offerings of the evening, already tastefully arranged by madam's own Swiss maid. But she walked straight through to her bedroom and sank with a sigh into the armchair before the glass.

"Who brought this?" she asked, peevishly picking a twisted note from amid the golden furniture of her toilet table.

"I never saw it until this minute, madam!" the Swiss maid answered in dismay. "It was not there ten minutes ago, I am sure, madam!"

"Where have you been since?"

"Down to the servants' hall, for one minute, madam."

Miss Bouverle read the note, and was an animated being in three seconds.

"I am tired of you, Lea," cried madam. "You let people bring notes into my room, and you say you were only out of it a minute. Be good enough to leave me for the night. I can look after myself for once!"

The maid protested, wept, but was expelled, and a key turned between them; then Hilda Bouverle read her note again.

Escaped this afternoon. Came to your concert. Hiding in boudoir. Give me five minutes or raise alarm, which you please. STINGAREE.

A touch to her hair, a glance in the pier glass, and all for a notorious convict, broken prison! So into the boudoir with her grandest air; but again she locked the door behind her, and, sweeping round, beheld a man in immaculate evening clothes profoundly bowing to her.

"Are you the writer of a note found on my dressing table?" she demanded, every syllable off the ice.

"I am."

"Then who are you, besides being an impudent forger?"

"You name the one crime I never committed," said he. "I am Stingaree."

And they gazed in each other's eyes, but not yet were hers to be believed.

"He only escaped this afternoon."

"I am he."

And he drew nearer, but she looked all the harder.

"Yes, I begin to remember your face, but it has changed."

"It has gazed on prison walls for many years."

"Now I know!" she cried. "You did me a service years ago. I am not to forget it!"

"It is not I who have kept it before your mind."

"Perhaps not. But that's why you come to me tonight."

"FAGGED-OUT" WOMEN

Will Find a Helpful Suggestion in This Letter.

Overworked, run down "fagged out" women who feel as though they could hardly drag about, should profit by Mrs. Carter's experience. She says:—"I am the mother of six children and I got so weak and run-down that I couldn't eat anything and it seemed almost impossible for me to get around and do my work. I tried different doctors' remedies without benefit. I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and received so much benefit from the first bottle that I continued to take it, and it has built up my strength and made me strong and well. I consider Vinol the best medicine I have ever taken and advise all weak, run-down women to try it." Mrs. Bessie Carter, State Road, N. C.

If all the tired, overworked, run-down women in Maysville could only realize how our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol, supplies the vital elements necessary to build up blood and strength, we wouldn't be able to supply the demand.

A REMARKABLE STATEMENT

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill.—"While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. I cannot understand why women don't see how much pain and suffering they would escape by taking your medicine. I cannot praise it enough for it saved my life and kept me from the Insane Hospital."—Mrs. E. SHELDON, 5057 S. Halsted St., Englewood, Ill.

Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

TREASON IN THE SUNNY SOUTH.

(Lexington Leader.)

One naturally expects more or less unfriendly criticism of President Wilson and his policies by the partisan and independent press of the north, but when a Bourbon Democratic paper from as far south in Dixie as Florida rises to discourse upon any "great failure of the Wilson administration," it is time to wonder what else is coming to pass in these remarkable days.

The Times-Union, an old and widely known Democratic newspaper, published at Jacksonville, is the offender. But let the Times-Union speak for itself. It says:

"If we take it for granted that the Baltimore platform correctly expressed the views of Democrats, we find that domestic issues of paramount importance demand attention and consideration. Those issues are still unsettled in any permanent fashion and much remains to be done toward perfecting the processes by which reforms were to be brought about.

"But because the administration has done little or nothing to secure due and proper recognition of our rights from the belligerents of Europe, it is more than probable that foreign policies will receive greatest consideration during the coming campaign—at a time when our home affairs are most deserving of thought we find the whole people engaged in discussing the affairs of others. After studying the issues of protection until some decent understanding of the real nature of the tariff had been absorbed by the people at large, we find ourselves shifted away from our own business greatly to our loss that we may talk and write about the business of some who insist that they be allowed to work out their own salvation. Here is really the great failure of the Wilson administration. Had a simple and clean cut decision been enforced early in the war we would now be ready to vote on our proper policies instead of fighting the issues peculiar to Europe. If armaments over the sea so endanger our safety as to justify the need of preparedness proposed to us, it would have been cheaper to make the strength felt while Europe is divided—a pledge that armed preparedness was to be ended might have engaged our help and a decisive decision promoted at much less cost than preparedness would impose upon us. On the contrary, we could have maintained our position of isolation by declaring non-intercourse until our lawful demands under the law had been treated with proper respect—neither party of belligerents could have endured the loss of our 'benevolent neutrality.' To declare the rule and to ask the support of other neutrals would have gone far to restrict the diffusion of the war spirit; without such restraint we may see yet other nations about the battlefields compelled to take sides. Holland and Scandinavia are suffering almost as much by neutrality as they would suffer as belligerents—Rumania and Spain may be driven into line at any moment.

"Today we stand in greater danger of trouble than when the war began—we have taken positions from which we can not recede and the parties opposite refuse to yield an inch. The deadlock in diplomacy with us is as firm as that in the trenches of Europe with the difference that we need not have taken any such position while it has been forced upon them. The President held in his hand a weapon that would have proved more effective than armies or navies; if he shrank from the thought of embargo or non-intercourse would have called upon the army and navy to defend our view of the law? The lack of an army could not have made him 'watch and wait' in the case of Mexico; when he now asks for preparedness we must assume that he would still have protested in vain though his continental army had been ready when Americans were drowned by wholesale and American business interrupted by the belligerents of Europe."

The trust magnates now on trial should remember the good old maxim, "When in doubt tell the truth."

True modesty is never proved by an assumed ignorance.

FERTILIZERS FROM MUNICIPAL WASTE.

Washington, D. C.—A survey of the nation's resources in fertilizer materials has drawn attention to the large supply of these to be found in the accumulation of garbage in cities. This waste material contains nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, which are recognized as essential to the production of large crops. Valuable as these elements are to the farms of the country, the garbage in which they are found is a source of trouble and expense to the cities. It seems, therefore, that this garbage can be disposed of most advantageously by returning it to the soil in the form of fertilizer.

In cities of 100,000 people or more the reduction of garbage by methods which furnish a residue fit for fertilizer use has proved to be a profitable municipal enterprise, and in smaller communities it might be well self-sustaining. Numerous analyses of raw garbage show that, on the average, grease constitutes 3.5 per cent; and of the fertilizer ingredients potash, 0.3 per cent; bone phosphate, 1 per cent, and nitrogen in the form of ammonia, 1 per cent. On this basis the value of a ton of raw garbage is about $5, the grease being worth $3 and the fertilizer ingredients about $2.

Since the grease is of more value than the fertilizer, the reduction process is primarily designed to recover the grease. There are three principal methods of doing this. The garbage is cooked and steamed and then pressed dry and degreased in gasoline. Or the garbage is dried directly in rotary hot air kilns and then degreased in gasoline; or it is dried and degreased in one operation.

As raw fertilizer contains 70 per cent water and 3.5 per cent grease, the yield of the tankage residue or fertilizer should be about 25 per cent. Thus, four tons of raw garbage should be made to yield one ton of dried tankage and $12 worth of grease. In the retail market the dried tankage sells for about $10 a ton and at wholesale for $7.50. There has been no great fluctuation in these prices for some time. In actual practice, however, the percentage of tankage obtained is not usually 25 per cent.

At present, however, only six cities in the United States operate their own reduction plants, and about 20 send their garbage to privately owned plants. These produce in the course of a year 160,000 tons of tankage or fertilizer, made from 1,045,000 tons of raw garbage. If all of the 199 cities of the United States which have a population of 30,000 or over should adopt this method of garbage disposal, the total yield should be from 637,500 tons to 937,500 tons of fertilizer per year. This would be worth from $4,780,000 to $7,000,000. Additional fertilizer material could also be obtained in the cities from dead animals, street sweepings and stable manure.

This subject, specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture, believe, merits careful consideration, because it will be of advantage both to the American farmer and to the cities from which he obtains his fertilizer.

HUGE SUMS SPENT FOR CHEWING GUM.

Washington.—The chewing gum habit has cost the American people for chicle alone nearly $35,000,000 in the last ten years, or almost five times as much as we paid Russia for Alaska, according to figures furnished by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce. Normally our annual imports of chicle amount to 7,000,000 pounds, for which we pay about $2,500,000 in the countries of origin, and to which must be added customs duties in our own ports of about $750,000.

Imports of chicle gum during the fiscal year 1915 were as follows: From Mexico, 2,197,000 pounds; from Canada, 2,181,000 pounds; from British Honduras, 1,139,000 pounds; from Venezuela, 952,000 pounds; from the Central American republics, 26,000 pounds and from all other countries, 5,000 pounds. Chicle is not produced in Canada, but large quantities from other British possessions are handled through the dominion. In 1913 the total imports of the gum amounted to 13,759,000 pounds, and that is the record importation for any one year. In 1915 the total was 6,500,000 pounds.

Chicle is the dried milky juice of the sapodilla tree, which is one of a large family of tropical trees known as bully-trees. Some of the gum is used as a substitute for gutta serena, but the bulk of it is used in the manufacture of chewing gum.

Journals of the United States Congress have been kept and published from the first assembling of delegates in Philadelphia in 1774.

INTERESTING STORY OF $100 BILL.

In the April American Magazine we read the following:

"Mrs. Davis came into possession of a $100 bill. Prizing this money because it was the first she ever earned, she kept the original bill in her possession most of the time on her person. Only a short time before her death were her relatives aware that she still had the bill.

"When a little girl, 9 years old, she deposited $10 in a savings bank and received a pass book. She carried this book with her for seventy-five years. Three weeks before she died she told her grandson she was curious to know if the bank was still doing business and what had become of her $10 deposit. A letter giving the number of her pass book, the amount of the deposit and her maiden and present name, was written. Just one week from the day the letter was posted a reply was received to the effect that the deposit, together with the accrued interest for seventy-five years, amounted in all to $325.65; was in the bank for Mrs. Davis.

"Had she deposited the $100 bill in a savings bank paying 4 per cent interest compounded quarterly, the principal and interest would have amounted to the handsome sum of $601.89. The $100 bill would have earned for her five other $100 bills.

"Her investment at 9 years of age multiplied itself for her thirty-one times. Her sentiment at the age of 39 persisted in for forty-five years, deprived her of many comforts in her old age which the $600 would have provided."

FEDERAL COURT

April Term of Judge Cochran's Court At Covington Began Monday With Good Sized Docket.

The April session of the United States Court convened in Covington Monday morning, Judge Cochran presiding.

Twenty-four cases will be called on the equity docket; eleven cases on the admiralty docket, and thirty cases on the law docket.

Twenty grand jurors have been summoned.

Judge Cochran will enforce Rule XIII, which reads as follows:

"Any case which hereafter remains on the docket for four consecutive terms, without any proceedings therein, other than orders of continuance, shall, at the fourth term, be dismissed from the docket as, of course without prejudice, for want of prosecution, with leave to restate before the first day of the next succeeding term, for good cause shown in writing; such dismissal shall not be entered if counsel shows by statement in writing good cause for the lapsing of time."

Two cases, the Kentucky Coal and Timber Development Company against the Coff Land Company, on the equity docket, and Albert C. Knoll against the Mariola M. Allen, which is on the docket, come under this rule. In the case of Kennon Dunham against the Kelly-Koett-Rya Company of Covington, Judge Cochran Saturday handed down an opinion adjudging that the defendant company did not infringe upon a patent belonging to the plaintiff.

On application of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York, as trustee, Judge Cochran appointed the Covington Savings Bank and Trust Company receiver for the Kentucky Coal and Timber Development Company. The defendants are restrained from disposing of 4,979 shares of stock of the Breathitt Coal, Iron and Lumber Company, or any of several thousand acres of land in Breathitt and Knox counties, Kentucky.

The petitioner avers it holds gold bonds issued by the defendant company, November 22, 1910. These aggregate $1,000,000. It is asserted, and is said to be secured by a collateral deed of trust. The bonds yielding 6 per cent for twenty years are alleged to be an outstanding obligation of the company. The receiver is to take charge upon furnishing bonds of $25,000.

The Hutchcraft anti-screen bill became effective before the Legislature adjourned, as Governor Stanley approved that measure during the session. Others effective are the following:

RIVER NEWS

The Greenwood down Sunday put off here 100 barrels of salt for the M. C. Russell Company. She will be the Charleston packet Monday night.

Motorboat owners in this section are getting busy, preparing their boats for the coming season.

The Tacoma will be down for Cincinnati Monday night.

A couple of sections of hose attached to a fire plug on Front street, between Limestone and Market, and a good supply of water would be the thing to wash the muddy sediment off, as the river goes down. The mud is now soft and could be gotten off in a short time and it would make that portion of the street look like a new one.

The gauge at 8 o'clock Monday morning, showed 47.5, a fall of 3.8 since the crest passed. The rains of Sunday, if no heavier up the reaches than they were here, will not have any appreciable effect on the big river.

Mr. J. Barbour Russell returned Saturday night from Cincinnati, where he has been at the bedside of his wife who underwent a serious surgical operation there last week. Mrs. Russell's many friends will be glad to know that she is getting along nicely.

THE ARM OF A SETTEE

It was hollow. In cleaning house mother discovered it. She thought it was a good place to keep her money. She gathered together $150 in bills and hid them in the hollow of the arm of the old settee. The other day she went to add some more bills to them, when she found mice had made a nest of her $150. The bank is a good place to "hide" your money. It is safe and so is your money.
